A police car and a screaming siren -
A pneumatic drill and ripped up concrete -
A baby wailing and stray dogs howling - The screech of brakes and lamp light blinking -

that's entertainment

A smash of glass and the rubble of boots -
An electric train and a ripped up
'phone booth - Paint splattered walls and the cry of a tomcat -
Lights going out and a kick in the belly -

that's entertainment

Days of speed and slow time mondays - Pissing down with rain on a boring wednesdays -
Watching the news and not eating your tea - A freezing cold flat and damp on the walls -

that's entertainment

Waking up at 6 a.m. on a cool warm morning - Opening the windows and breathing in petrol -
An amateur band rehearsing in a nearby yard - Watching the tele and thinking about your holidays -

that's entertainment

Waking up from bad dreams and smoking cigarettes - Cuddling a warm girl and smelling stale perfume -
A hot summers' day and sticky black tarmac -
Feeding ducks in the park and wishing you were faraway -

that's entertainment

Two lovers kissing amongst the screams of midnight -
Two lovers sinning the tranquillity of solitude -
Getting a cab and travelling on buses - Reading the graffiti about slashed seat affairs -

that's entertainment

Me and My Complexities

I am a tower, the most important person in my life.
I am a flower, flowering, but not in full bloom.
I am like a European train, always punctual; however,
I am also like rain because I hate predictability.
I am a tree stubborn as can be.
I am a bee, fickle.
I am like a house, changeable.
I am also like a mouse, timid and shy.
I am also like a blackboard only half filled.
I am like a Ford; expensive to upkeep.

Voici donc un syllogisme exemplaire: Le chat a quatre pattes. Isidore et Fricot ont chacun quatre pattes. Donc Isidore et Fricot sont chats. Mon chien aussi a quatre pattes. Alors, c'est un chat. Tous les chats sont mortels. Socrate est mortel. Socrate etait donc un chat.

Have you ever tried to come up With a reason for your birth or a poem just to sum up An excuse for life on Earth?

Deciding on a unique phrase
To leave my distinct mark Life has no walls, but it's a maze and I look better in the dark

So as I go on wandering
This endless path of life
I still continue pondering
The end.

You want a rhyme?

To look with pride on every year,
To dream and plan anew,
To treasure friendships you hold dear,
To think and hope and do,
To love the beauty life imparts,
To know the joy of giving,
To hold a song within your heart—
This is the art of living.

Divine intervention will hopefully rear its welcome head again this year and grant our seniors the strength and creativity to pull their own pages together, as well as the less important projects they must attend to, before the final deadline has passed. The yearbook owes its greatest debt to the creativity of three persons; Martha Crawford has graced us with the artwork that adorns the book, Carter Brooks has again championed the photographer's cause, and Mr. Penn carried us all in our, weekly, hour of need. The yearbook staff, whose herculean effort on the format of the book forced us to sacrifice our own pages until the last minute*, was made up of Lissa, Peter, Amy, Alison, Annie, and Jenny. (who has now stared at the typewriter for far too many hours.) Thanks also needs to be given to the photographers who contributed to this book: Jenny McLaury, Andrew Grant, Dana McDermott, Melinda Maas, Lissa Franklin, Annie Maguire, Amy Branger, Chris Giorni, Julie Mclark, Jarred Brown, Romany Hall, Eric Dreyer, Scott Harris, Reuben Jacobson, Sarah Mendelsohn, Karl Tede, and Ilana Trumbull. I hope that we have showcased the year properly and that we may all return to it, remember, and look ahead.

Liam

P.S. Lissa deserves special recognition for her last minute manual dexterity on the typewriter.

* Peter Towle, of course, excluded.
